Use Big Guns In Effort to Halt Drive on Paris

Famed Artillery of World War Fires at 100-Yard Range Against Germans' Juggernauts as France Moves Desperately to Stem Nazis.

BULLETIN

PARIS—(AP)—In a sudden reconstruction of the French cabinet, Premier Paul Reynaud took charge of the war ministry, and named Marshal Henri Philippe Petain, World war hero, vice premier, and Edouard Daladier foreign minister.

BULLETIN

LONDON — (UP) — The German advance on the French front has "slackened," British military quarters said today, but it was indicated that the slowing might be only temporary. Exhaustion of German units participating in the battle was said to be "very apparent" but British military experts said that "the situation still is very serious."

(By United Press)

PARIS—Thousands of French 75's, the famous three-inch guns of the World war, were rushed into the Meuse salient today to infiltrate into German mechanized columns and, firing at point-blank range, stop the 30-ton and 70-ton steel monsters which had driven to within 90 miles of Paris.

It was a completely new move to smash the German offensive.

A military informant asserted that the 75's, firing many shots to the minute, were blasting at German tanks at 100-yard ranges and were creating havoc among the mechanized columns which were operating at daring distances ahead of their infantry.

Guns and front line shock troops, operating together under the death-stand order by Gen. Maurice Gamelin, commander-in-chief, dashed in at the mechanized units and at the same time attacked German infantry which tried to move forward to support the tanks.

The movement was an emergency one to chop up the mechanized columns which, attacking in wedge-shaped masses, had forced a great bulge in the Meuse region in the north.

At the same time, French heavy artillery, now at the fighting front, was said by a military informant to have halted the Germans along the south wall of the bulge or pocket by starting a terrific pounding of the German lines between Sedan and Rethel.

As the 75's went into action 84-year-old Marshal Philippe Petain hero of Verdun, arrived from Madrid, where he is ambassador, and went into conference at once with Premier Paul Reynaud.

Immediately after talking to Petain, Reynaud called War Minister Edouard Daladier into conference.

This morning's high command communique, No. 515 of the war, said:

"In France battles are continuing violently in the regions already indicated by last night's communique.

(These were particularly the Avesnes-Vervins front. Vervins is 50 miles west of Sedan, 22 miles

British Fighters Win Air Victory Over 20 Bombers

LONDON—(AP)—The air ministry announced today ten German Junkers 87 bombers were shot down by nine Hurricane fighters in a single battle over France yesterday.

A communique said the Hurricanes rushed to attack 20 enemy bombers when they were seen circling over a wood. The squadron leader shot down three planes, four Hurricane pilots got one bomber each and the patrol jointly shot down three others. The remaining ten fled.

No British planes were lost in this action.

Another section of three Hurricanes over Belgium attacked more than 20 Nazi dive bombers and downed one, the ministry reported.

A British Spitfire patrolling off the Dutch coast went after a Junker 88, Germany's newest type twin-engine bomber. The Nazi bomber dived from 14,000 feet to 300 feet at 400 miles per hour in a vain effort to shake off the British plane but two bursts from the eight guns on the Spitfire disabled the engines and the bomber crashed into a breakwater.

DEFENSE GETS RIGHT-OF-WAY

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The mightiest peacetime preparedness drive in American history got the right-of-way on all fronts today, and the titular leaders of the Republican party put their weight behind it to give it momentum.

"Action—and action now" was the unphrased slogan as congress cut through more legislative preliminaries toward the objective of having the extraordinary $1,182,000,000 defense program ready for senate and house approval next week.

A senate subcommittee set the pace, voting quickly in favor of $647,648,994 in extra army appropriations recommended in President Roosevelt's defense message and then adding an additional, unrequested $30,000,000 for more regular troops.

Plans were being simultaneously drafted elsewhere to cover the whole sphere of military effort.

Led by former President Herbert Hoover and Alfred M. Landon, 1936 presidential nominee, key Republican figures backed the administration in putting defense needs foremost.

There was conjecture in some quarters as to whether a big-partisan defense coalition might be in the offing.

Interest likewise attached to

How Germans Broke Through Allied Lines

This Central Press map graphically illustrates how the Germans, hurling their high-speed mechanized forces forward in a titanic hammer blow, pierced Allied positions and smashed to within 75 miles of Paris. Ohio Valley Area Proposed As Safe for War Industries

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—The Ohio valley region, with its supplies of Illinois steel and West Virginia coal, would be a fairly safe location for strategic war industries, defense experts reported today.

Discussing President Roosevelt's suggestion that future American airplane and munitions plants should be placed in the interior, these experts noted that the Ohio valley region is approximately 1,000 miles from potentially vulnerable Atlantic coast and nearly double that distance from the Pacific.

Farther west, the Colorado-Wyoming area offers both coal and iron, the essential sinews of guns, munitions and other war materials. This section would be safe from attack from any direction, in the opinion of the experts.

Mr. Roosevelt's proposal to place the aircraft plants between the Alleghenies and the Rockies recalled Soviet Russia's experiment in building a vast military structure in the heart of the country, far removed from the danger of enemy attack.

Soviet Russia, under the first "five year plan," begun in 1928, strategically placed its industries of military importance far inland on what had once been a desolate region of forests and Tundra. Russia then was facing two possible enemies—Japan on the east, Germany on the west—and plotted its industrial layout so as to be safe from both.

Berlin Claims Two French Divisions Smashed on Maginot Line.

Germans Hail Successful Use of Mechanized Troops and Parachute Forces.

(By United Press)

BERLIN—Germany was stated officially today to have captured the great Belgian port of Antwerp, smashed forward against the main French defenses from the river Oise to Sedan and advanced her main southern army to within 100 miles of Paris.

"The German war flag flies over the Antwerp city hall," the high command communique said after describing a swift attack that broke Allied defenses before the Belgian port, only 100 miles from the shores of England.

The high command said that the massive German offensive through Belgium and into France had gained further territory in the Sedan sector, smashed two French divisions on the Maginot line defenses south of Maubeuge and pursued "the fleeing enemy" as far as the Upper Oise river.

Official sources said that the main German southern army was within 100 miles of Paris. This army was distinguished from flying mechanized columns which were reported to have slashed through the French lines toward Laon, St. Quentin and beyond Hirson in widely separated stabs toward Paris and toward the channel ports.

The gains made by these mechanized columns continued vague

OTTO IN FRANCE

Austrian Throne Pretender and Mother Escape.

PARIS — (UP) — Archduke Otto, pretender to the throne of Austria, and his mother, ex-Empress Zita, who were in Belgium at the start of Germany's blitzkrieg, escaped safely to France, it was learned reliably today.

Caution!

Hitler Control of Belgium's Chief Port Presents Double Menace to Defense Of French Capital and London Air Safety.

(By Associated Press)

Antwerp, anchor of the Allies' northern flank, was claimed today by the Germans as Adolf Hitler's vanguards were reported to have carried the battlefield to within 60 miles of Paris.

Nazi forces unfurled the Swastika flag over Belgium's chief port and commercial city, DNB, official German news agency reported, after a lightning stab through its fortifications—rated among the strongest in Europe.

In German hands, Antwerp is a double-edged threat to the Allies—a menace to their whole line defending Paris, and a gate to the channel ports from which the Nazis could loose an aerial blitzkrieg on England.

German tanks, armored cars and warplanes blasted deeper inroads into northern France today but the Allies indicated they were beginning to check the Nazi thrusts.

Adolf Hitler's advance guards had swept to within 60 miles of Paris and the main army was only 40 miles behind; authorized German sources said.

The situation on the western front "is very serious but certainly no worse and possibly a little bit better" than yesterday, a British spokesman asserted.

Pounding into stiffening French ranks, the Nazis were gaining only at the expense of tremendous casualties, the French declared.

At least half of Germany's entire mechanized army was said to be leading the offensive in what a French war ministry spokesman called "the most gigantic battle of all times."

Between 2,500 and 3,000 German tanks were believed to have been assembled in the French pocket, and, at some places, French artillery was shelling them at point blank.

Retreat in Belgium was admitted by the Allies but was explained as a withdrawal to conform with the situation in France.

Capture of 2,000 Dutch and French soldiers in France was reported by the Nazi high command.

The Dutch commander on Walcheren island, in the southwestern Zeeland province, had offered to capitulate, it said, and several Dutch naval vessels were taken.

Fighting in the air was unabated.

Nine British hurricane fighters shot down 10 German Junkers bombers over France yesterday, the British air ministry declared.

Disregarding the Nazis' numerical superiority, the Allies were pitting their fighters against hundreds of German planes and were dumping what the French said were thousands of tons of bombs on German forces and communications lines.

War Bulletins

PARIS—(UP)—An air raid alarm was sounded in Paris at 4:22 p. m. (10:22 a. m. EST).

BERLIN—(AP)—German naval units have mined South African ports, the high command announced today. The disclosure was made in a terse communique, which said: "Units of the German navy had laid mines before South African ports which are serving as bases for enemy naval units."

LEAMINGTON, Ont.—(INS)—Because Canada is at war with Germany, the Leamington council today approved a resolution forbidding the use of the German language in public places for the duration of the war. A sizable portion of the population is of German descent.

PARIS—(AP)—Belgian forces at Namur are still holding out, Havas, French news agency, reported today in a dispatch from "somewhere in Belgium." King Leopold was reported to have sent the city's defenders a message calling on them to "resist to the end for the fatherland."

BERLIN—(AP)—DNB, German official news agency, reported today that 29 civilians were killed and 51 injured in an air raid on Hamburg. A number of houses and other buildings were reported damaged.

Schorr's Job as State G. O. P. Chief Left to Party

BRICKER AND BURTON HOLD PEACE PARLEY

Cleveland Relief Still Sore Spot in Ohio Republican Faction Dispute.

(By United Press)

COLUMBUS—The question whether efforts will be made to oust Republican State Chairman Ed D. Schorr was left unanswered today after a prolonged conference between Governor Bricker and Mayor Harold H. Burton of Cleveland, Republican senatorial candidate, whose nomination in the primary election Schorr tried to prevent.

After the conference, during which both politics and the Cleveland relief situation were discussed, Bricker said that Schorr was satisfactory to him and that he had never made any attempt to dominate selection of a state chairman.

Burton declined to make a direct answer as to his intentions toward Schorr.

"The party wants the right answer and will take plenty of time to get it," he said.

He admitted that the subject was discussed "in its relation to the campaign."

Both he and Governor Bricker insisted the ultimate decision rests with the party state central committee which legally elects the state chairman. The decision probably will be made when the committee meets in two weeks. It was announced that Bricker and Burton will confer again next week. Later a meeting of all state and congressional candidates will be held at the governor's office.

Burton said he "brought the governor up to date" on poor relief conditions in Cleveland. Both indicated they were seriously concerned over the outcome of a pending suit in the state supreme court to test the validity of a proposed $2,300,000 delinquent tax bond issue intended to finance Cleveland relief needs during the rest of the year. The court has set the case for hearing May 29.

Governor Bricker arranged with Burton for representatives of the state welfare department to go to Cleveland next week to discuss the relief problem with city officials.

Burton said that the relief situation was about the same as last winter when a dispute over financing methods seriously strained relations between him and Bricker. The mayor insisted that although the issuance of bonds would meet any immediate emergency in Cleveland he did not believe that the money thus realized would be sufficient for all of 1940 even assuming that the relief level remained about the same.

Roosevelt Given Oregon Delegates In Friday's Vote

PORTLAND, Ore. —(AP)— Oregon Democrats recommended President Roosevelt for a third term today but a big portion of the state decided against a New Deal created issue—the public distribution of Bonneville Dam federal power.

The president swept past Vice-President Garner 7 to 1 in yesterday's presidential primaries, to win the state's 10 delegates to the Democratic national convention.

Nearly half the state's precincts—711 out of 1693—gave Roosevelt 30,194 against Garner's 4,918.

Portland, served by two private utility companies, apparently rejected, more than 2 to 1, efforts to create a people's utility district for distributing electricity from the Columbia river hydro-electric project.

Republicans presented Senator Charles McNary, Oregon, a greater presidential nomination endorsement than the combined Democratic count for Roosevelt and Garner. He tallied 36,124 in 666 precincts.

Up and Down THE STREET

Always the victim of much of the kidding that goes on at the courthouse, Deputy Sheriff Frank Robinson is getting more than his share now that he is the Democratic nominee for sheriff. If he should be elected, Robinson would be the first bachelor sheriff in the county in several years. This being leap year, some of the courthouse girls have already offered to be the jail matron, but Robinson said he prefers to wait and see how the election comes out before accepting any of the proposals.

Mushroom hunter stories are floating about the city thick and fast but this one is a little different. It seems that a Mansfield business man was among a party of men out yesterday looking for mushrooms in southern Richland county. Becoming separated from his companions, he got lost, wandered over farm fields until he emerged somewhere out along the Possum Run road. He went to a farm house, phoned his store and had his truck driver take him back to where he had left his automobile, five miles away.

Members of the staff of the "John Simpson Times," student newspaper at John Simpson junior high school, who attended the annual dinner for the staff in the cafeteria last night, decided unanimously to bestow upon H. J. Dotson, principal, the school's record for fast eating. Dotson had finished his dinner and had been given a second helping before some of the others had even been served their dinner, and that brought on a lot of kidding that was even being carried over through today.

In this month's issue of "The Woman," a readers' digest of magazine articles especially for women, is an article by Richard Maxwell, former Mansfield man who has a top sustaining program on the Columbia Broadcasting system. The article is "One Way to Buy Happiness" and advances the theory that the reasons persons are dissatisfied with life is because some part of themselves is shut out of life for means of expression, and he advocates that the solution is an expressive hobby. The frustrated self, he explains, can be released through some hobby. Maxwell has become famous for his original poems of "Comfort and Cheer" which he uses on his radio programs.

MAYOR, STATE ROUTE TRAFFIC OVER AUSDALE

Residents Protest, But State Complains of Cost and Calls Detour City Problem.

Over the protests of west side residents, city and state officials today laid plans for detouring U. S. route 30-N traffic over Ausdale avenue during the reconstruction of West Fourth street by the state highway department this summer.

Traffic routed over the street earlier this week, but detoured over Western avenue today due to a track meet at Stadium field, will be routed back over Ausdale avenue Monday, Mayor William J. Locke said.

His announcement was made this morning following a conference with Murray D. Shaffer, division highway engineer of Ashland, who sought the city detour, complaining that it was costing the state $450 a month to maintain the detour over the Shelby-Ontario road.

Ausdale avenue, an asphalt surfaced street, was put down two years ago and City Engineer W. C. Statler advised Locke that the heavy truck traffic will not affect its wear during a short period.

Mayor Locke had objected to routing the truck traffic over the newly laid street chiefly because the route passed the Senior high school adding to the hazard of students crossing the street.

Threaten Court Action.

Although residents in the vicinity of the street have objected on the same basis and threatened the city with court action to remove the detour, state officials pointed out that they did not yet have the street closed and that it was not their responsibility to maintain re-routing.

West Fourth street has been closed by the city during the installation of new water lines on the street and therefore it is the city's responsibility, Shaffer maintained.

Locke said he would ask the state to take over the detour responsibility as soon as they started work on the street.

Meanwhile the mayor today issued a call for a special council meeting Tuesday evening for approval of legislation that will grant the state permission to go ahead on the project.

The measures, tabled at the May 7 meeting, call for an appropriation of $48,000 to meet the city and property owners share of the cost.

Not That It Matters

Progress of Nazi Drive In Europe Brings Forth Columnar 'I Told You So'

—By JANE WILLIAMS

TWO YEARS AGO—or was it longer?—I brought considerable wrath and contumely upon my bloody but unbowed head by saying in this column that the wave of alleged peace propaganda sweeping the country was a short-cut to war, that trying to keep the peace of the world through education was futile and that disarmament was just another way of sticking out our national neck.

The only way to keep peace, said I, was to be prepared to fight like hell at all times.

Many sincere and well-intentioned ladies whose sons were growing to manhood reproached me publicly and privately. "Why not," they demanded, "take the money that would be spent for battleships and an air force and build great universities with it in which to educate our children against war?"

Being strictly feminine, I now rise to shout "I told you so."

Because Czechoslovakia, Poland, Finland, Norway, and now Holland and Belgium have been sacrificed on the altar of unpreparedness, "The criminal unpreparedness of Great Britain" an international commentator called it the other night.

IF YOU educated all the world against war and its cruel futility, and one Napoleon or Hitler popped up in every century, your education program would be worthless. Because it isn't the millions of pacifists who make war.

I'm a pacifist—but one who believes in having a six-gun in both pockets, with a hand grenade tucked away for an emergency.

The same peace wave which swept America for a number of years hit England too—we know now that much of it was the clever propaganda of the Soviet — and both Stanley Baldwin and his apostle, Neville Chamberlain, fell under the spell of it. Anthony Eden and Churchill, both of whom believed in keeping peace by force of arms, were kicked out. When Great Britain, which holds the responsibility of policing Europe, was called upon to meet that responsibility before Munich in September, 1938, there wasn't so much as a bobby's night stick in all England.

And so hundreds of thousands of young boys and men who were "educated for peace" are being killed.

THE United States, whose responsibility is to police the Americas, has been just as negligent as Great Britain. We have been "criminally negligent" on two fronts: as the richest nation in the world we aren't prepared to defend much of anything, and as the most tolerant nation we have permitted all kinds of Trojan horses to be set up within our cities.

We've spent millions of dollars to dig worthless ditches with WPA labor when we could have used that labor in defense plans; we've maintained CCC camps all over the nation—one of the smartest things we've done—but not a boy in them has ever been trained to use even a pop gun. Military training doesn't hurt anyone, and if the CCC boys had been given a couple of hours a day military training along with their other work, we would now have a reserve army of impressive proportions, what with the small regular army, the National guard and the ROTC.

But the "peace disciples" held up their hands in holy horror and protest when such a plan was suggested.

ON the other hand, we seem to be a little hysterical now that there is sudden need for national defense, and the sum asked by the president seems all out of proportion to our needs. He has asked for a sum which is approximately one third of the total Allied war debt to America and which financed all of the Allies for two years or more.

Wouldn't it be better, instead of going wild in hysteria, to marshall our entire industrial forces so that we could turn out thousands of planes within a few months IF THEY ARE NEEDED? Couldn't we start with 10 or 15 thousand planes, and then add to them as the need appears? The most important step, it seems to me, is the immediate training of enough good pilots to man the planes. After all, we can turn out planes a lot faster than we can pilots.

WE AMERICANS, smart as we are in most things, can be terribly dumb on very important matters. When Martin Dies turned up evidence day after day to prove that Trojan horses were being set up all over the nation, we yelled "Red-baiter" at him. The administration itself, headed by the president and Mrs. Roosevelt, has done everything to discredit and discourage the Dies investigation. Yet our greatest danger today is from these subversive groups or "Trojan horses," the very same forces which paralyzed the defense mechanism of Norway and Holland before they could swing into action.

Remember a man named Lindbergh, probably the greatest aviation expert in the world, whom we howled down and forced out of the service because he told England and he told us that German planes and flyers were superior to anything that Russia, Great Britain or America had?

If Great Britain had listened to this honest and authoritative report, instead of displaying her usual know-it-all superiority, she might not now be in the desperate position that she is.

And we Americans certainly would be better off if we recalled Lindbergh and begged him to take over supervision of our air forces instead of turning it over to the politicians as we did this week.

Hollywood Speaks---

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—Today's smart boy: Joe Penner, asking for no higher than third billing on "The Boys From Syracuse," in which he ranks under Allan Jones (top) and Martha Raye. . . . Joe, minus barnyard accompaniments including ducks and black sheep, looks very, very cute in a toga, but not so cute as Allan Jones. . . . Penner figures he's not the one to "carry" the picture or even lead with his chin on his first venture out of the B's. . . . Rodgers and Hart have written a new song, hit-bound, for the picture. Listen for "Who Are You?"

As a correspondent in comparatively peaceful Hollywood, I've always wondered how it would feel to be in the middle of a revolution. Carmen Morales, who was, tells me it feels like nothing at all

Miss Morales ("The Primrose Path," "The Long Voyage Home") is a Spanish girl, born in the Canary Islands, long-time resident of Mexico, educated in the U. S. midwest.

She was dancing around Europe and happened to be in Barcelona shopping, one day when a great quiet broke out. It was like siesta hour, the merchants having drawn down their iron blinds and retreated inside their shops. One of them hailed her, invited her in, warning, "There's going to be a demonstration!"

Protesting, she followed him. Then there was pandemonium outside, shouts and shots and missiles crashing. In half an hour all was still. The shops opened, the people came out—and saw the wreckage of a street brawl. Miss Morales continued her shopping, unconcerned. . . . A short time later, Barcelona and all Spain were embroiled in civil war.

MARTIN KROSLECK ("Foreign Correspondent") is a young German who left Hitlerland a couple of years before Adolf took over. He is slight, ascetic, nervous-looking—an artist. He was painting pictures before he was discovered, on an eastern stage, for "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," in which (because he had relatives in Germany and also because he thought not too much of his role) he used an assumed name. He played a Goebbels-like propaganda official, so sinisterly offensive as to inspire an audience desire to punch his face in. He never had seen Goebbels, enjoyed creating the character from imagination. His roles since (in Espionage Agent" and the present) have been cut from the same cloth. In Germany he used to play juvenile roles (with Albert Basserman among others.) and he would like to bring to pictures a characterization of the dancer Nijinsky—an ambition held, I hear, by John Garfield also.

FRENCH COMBAT TANK ASSAULT WITH BIG 75'S

"Taking into account the general situation, Allied troops in Belgium carried out a retiring movement and withdrew west of Brussels.

"Our air force through the night violently attacked and bombed columns along roads and at points where the enemy was obliged to cross."

A war office informant said that the Allies withdrew from the Antwerp-Namur line to a point west of Brussels in order to prevent encirclement and the danger of being cut off from the armies fighting on the French front.

The war office analyst asserted that the Germans had thrown between 2,500 and 3,000 tanks into the battle yesterday—more than one-half of its mechanized force, as he put it.

With the battle now in its full fury the situation remained serious, he said, but there was a better impression today.

British air force planes were co-operating closely with the French and the London air ministry asserted today that British planes had heavily bombed German bases and lines of communication in France as well as Belgium during the night, in addition to attacking important military objectives in western Germany. Operations, the air ministry said, were on a heavy scale.

The Allied armies of France, Great Britain, Belgium and Holland were fighting with their backs to the channel ports and Paris, on the ninth day of the German blitzkrieg.

The battle had reached the crisis stage.

Brussels and Antwerp had fallen, the Dutch had been forced to abandon the two key islands of Beveland and Walcheren in the tiny corner of their country they still held; German tanks, attacking in wedge-shaped masses ripped into the Allied lines through the great bulges they had made and German dive bombers sent down an unrelenting blast of bombs and machine gun bullets.

French troops had been ordered to die where they stood if they could not advance.

It was admitted now that the German army with its overwhelming fleets of planes and tanks, had attacked, and pressed its attack, with a fury and persistence which general staffs of the Allied nations, in all their 20 years of preparation since the last war had never dreamed would be possible.

Fighting was described by French military experts as comparable with that of Verdun. 75 miles to the east, whose soil has been enriched by the rotting bones of hundred of thousands of World War sodliers.

But the battle was becoming even more furious. Both sides, military reports said here, were throwing reinforcements into the fight hour after hour.

The Serre river sector was the apex of the sounthern drive for the moment. Tanks, armored cars, motorcycle and bicycle troops and infantrymen were fighting in confused groups, with airplanes always over them, raining death.

Serious as the situation was from the Allied viewpoint morale of all troops was reported excellent. The forts of Liege and Namur, far behind the front on the German side, were reported holding still under their Belgian garrisons.

MASSED NAZI DRIVE GAINS MORE GROUND

Berlin Claims Two French Divisions Smashed on Maginot Line.

but reports circulated in Berlin indicated that some units were operating well in advance of the main army and might be within 70 or 75 miles of the French capital.

The importance of German progress toward the channel ports, which might be used as bases for aerial attack on Britain, was emphasized by the high command communique in a reference to Allied aerial attack on the great German ports of Hamburg and Bremen. The German air force would be in a position to strike powerfully at the British shipping center along the river Thames if bases were established in Belgium.

The German pressure was strong along the whole front. Given the minimum of rest, airplanes, tanks and infantry were hurled at the line in almost incessant waves. The objective was to keep the blitzkrieg from flagging and to try to turn the Allied withdrawal into a rout.

To this end, the high German staffs were keeping as close as possible to the front line to have better control of movements and be able to make split-second decisions. As an illustration of this strategy, it was disclosed that a lieutenant general of the parachute corps had taken part in the operations of one parachute formation.

Some German dispatches described the Allied withdrawal as already amounting to a rout. The newspaper Der Angriff gave this description: "Harried by our ever advancing light and heavy armoured forces, (Allied) troops must retire along roads which lie under artillery fire. Endlessly, squadrons of dive bombers hurtle destruction from the sky, letting go their loads at every objective offering itself above ground . . . flaming centers appear where the bombs hit munitions dumps; bridge girders collapse like matches; roads burst asunder; barracks and depots stand in flames; reinforcement trains are derailed—it's an infernal landscape through which the road backward leads."

Some of the military experts here said that the new weapons and techniques developed in this war, tank divisions; dive bombers; parachute corps and mass air transportation, would effect a tactical revolution in the conduct of future wars comparable to the phalanx formation initiated by Macedonian generals under Alexander the Great.

It was now claimed in Berlin that the use of tank divisions, dive bombers, parachute corps and mass aerial transport had disproved a theory existing almost up to the outbreak of this war—that the defensive side of war, as exemplified by the Maginot and Siegfried lines and anti-aircraft guns, had exceeded the offensive side. German tacticians said it now remained for the defensive side to develop counter weapons for these.

It was reported there that in many cases, German dive bombers were doing the work usually assigned to heavy artillery. The advantages of the bomber were defined as: 1. The bomber can get to the desired spot faster; 2. It can be applied more effectively against special targets, such as those far behind the lines; 3. although it cannot carry anywhere nearly as great a number of projectiles as a big gun would throw in the same time, it can lay down a bomb so as to be far more destructive than an artillery shell.

They have eight grandchildren and four great-grandchildren. Mr. Purdy was a farmer before his retirement 20 years ago.

LINEMEN TOLD COMPANY QUITS

Construction Firm Strikers Picket Offices in Shelby and Bucyrus.

BUCYRUS—Strike of engineering and construction men who service the Bucyrus, Shelby, Defiance, Van Wert and several other small telephone companies in northwestern Ohio, continued today and seven employes are carrying on peaceful picketing at the offices of the Bucyrus and Shelby telephone companies.

The strikers were employes of the Telephone and Construction company, which discontinued business last Monday. They are members of Local Union No. 1180 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical workers affiliated with the A. F. of L.

The strikers say they have stopped work because of the "unfair" labor policies of George G. Quatman, vice president and general manager of the company at Lima.

F. B. Knefel, manager of the Bucyrus and Shelby Telephone companies, said the employes are "refraining from work because their company discontinued operation."

It was reported that a complaint has been filed by the union against the company with the National Labor Relations board in Cleveland.

Mansfield News-Journal

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, SATURDAY, MAY 18, 1940.

Drive carefully tomorrow—help make Mansfield streets and Richland county highways safer.

Seems strange that General Sherman should have had such a bad opinion of war when it was so much milder.

According to one expert in child-training, if the child becomes unmanageable you should "switch its attention"—and, in the absence of a woodshed, the garage will probably suffice.

Westinghouse Shows Confidence

ANNOUNCEMENT of plans for further expansion of the Mansfield plant of Westinghouse is in accord with policies consistently maintained by that company since it made a small start in this city twenty-two years ago.

Selection of the advantageously-located Mansfield plant in which to manufacture a number of electrical products for which there has been a steadily increasing demand has been effective in bringing Westinghouse to top place among Mansfield industries, in number of employes and size of payroll.

Contemplated expenditure of an additional half million dollars for a new building and equipment will not only provide needed increase in production facilities but will naturally lead to requirement for more employes in the varied lines of work essential to successful operation of a large industry.

With the present number of employes approximating four thousand, and an annual payroll around $5,000,000, the importance of Westinghouse to Mansfield is readily realized, not alone in the extent of employment it provides and the salaries and wages it distributes here, but also in the prominent part which Westinghouse employes and their families take in all community activities and the interest they display in support of every worthy project intended for civic betterment.

Much of the growth of Westinghouse in Mansfield is attributed to the fine spirit of co-operation, and recognition of mutual interests, that has existed through many years in relations between employes and management, which has contributed in marked degree to steady earnings by employes, dependable production essential to successful operation, and, in consequence, the building up of an industry which either directly or indirectly benefits every resident of this city.

With anticipated steady increase in demand for electrical products, and continuance of conditions which have heretofore contributed to growth of this industry, it now appears that even greater expansion of Westinghouse in Mansfield may be confidently looked toward.

Argentina's Changed Attitude

AT LAST Argentina is beginning to play her part in upholding Pan-American principles. She is regarded as the most progressive nation in South America, and has almost the same position in that continent that the United States has in North America. Until lately, jealousy, dislike or indifference has kept her from co-operating with this country in hemispheric and world affairs. This attitude made united action almost impossible.

Now Argentina is getting into action. She has proposed, and the 21 republics of this hemisphere are now considering, a conference to revise our neutrality system and bring it into line with the new world situation. She wants an attitude "based on reality," aiming by a united front to make belligerents respect the position of the neutral nations in this hemisphere. A conference is desired for this purpose.

"It is suggested," said a recent dispatch from Buenos Aires, "that such a conference would draft a new warning against interference in American affairs, or the American way of life in any manner, in such strong language and with such strong teeth attached that none who would read it could doubt that the American republics stand united and prepared to resist to the utmost any encroachment in this hemisphere." Perhaps the time has come to accomplish this.

Emma Goldman's Disappointment

THE DEATH of Emma Goldman in Toronto stirs many thoughts. It was a long time ago that she was considered so powerful a menace to American democracy that she was first imprisoned and then deported to Russia.

She was an anarchist, and she was impatient of the slow processes of democracy. She always denied that she advocated violence, but her name was linked with many violent attacks on the existing order from 1896 to 1917. Her violent speech seemed to do more harm than good to the causes she championed.

What were those causes? She sought the end of social inequalities and economic exploitation. These aims seem reasonable enough today, but a great deal depends on the method.

Emma Goldman was bitterly disappointed by the Communist regime in Russia. Unlike many American Communists today, she was smart enough to see that the political and governmental change there had been only from one tyranny to another, and to admit the fact.

Advises Housework for Boys

SINCE many fathers nowadays are out of jobs, and mothers often have to make the family living, boys as well as girls should learn to do housework, says a woman educator. She thinks a time is coming when basic high school courses in home economics will be taken by both girls and boys.

It certainly never hurt any child to do a little cooking. And some knowledge and experience of that sort helps a lot when Mother for any reason happens to be absent at meal time.

Probably it doesn't hurt boys, either, to know how to sweep and make beds and so on. And indeed, boys have been known to pride themselves on such skills.

More Airmail Service

THE POSTOFFICE DEPARTMENT, after a year's trial, has recommended to congress that "pick-up" airmail between cities, and autogiro service between metropolitan postoffices and airports, be established on a perament basis.

The pick-up system will give airmail service to many communities that could not otherwise have it. The method is to drop a sack of mail and pick up another by flying low but not landing. The autogiro, being able to rise almost vertically into the air and to take off or land on very small areas, brings air service into the heart of a city without coming from the airport through heavy street traffic. The autogiro can land on skyscraper roofs, if necessary.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—Lunched with Charles Gorham today, and he told of an interesting experiment his publishing house, Doubleday-Doran, already has under way. They are bringing out biographies of all the important ports in the United States—intimate, revealing studies of such places as Gloucester, Baltimore, Seattle, New Orleans, San Diego and others which have romantic histories and which have played historic roles in the growth and development of this country.

Gloucester is being written by James B. Connolly, an authority on Gloucester history, and San Diego is being handled by Max Miller, who wrote "I Cover the Waterfront" and "He Went Away For Awhile." The story of Baltimore's port will be told by Hamilton Owens, editor of the Baltimore Sun. Archie Binns, author of "Lightship" and "The Laurels Are Cut Down," will handle Seattle.

For New Orleans no author has been assigned. The editors wanted Lyle Saxon ("Fabulous New Orleans"), or Roark Bradford, famed for his Negro stories, but they had other commitments and had to decline. It seems to me this is an assignment any author would leap at. The Port of New Orleans is unlike that of any other port in the world. It has flourished under five flags. It is a port of oil and bananas, of cotton and shrimp, and trappers and black-robed priests. Let's hope that the man who writes it puts his heart into it.

STILL another note from the publishing world—though from the fictional side—concerns that modern historian of the Revolutional scene, Kenneth Roberts. Distinguished for his novels of those early Americans who fought with, and later against, Benedict Arnold, he now is turning his hand to a novel of the Revolution from a Tory point of view. This is something that never has been attempted by an American author.

WHILE we are discussing authors, let's go back a moment to Robert E. Sherwood, the lanky, thin-faced playwright, whose newest drama, "There Shall Be No Night," has caused such a disturbance among political and news commentators, as well as students of the drama. Mr. Sherwood thinks too little of an enlightened nature is being said about Europe in this country, and he bitterly alludes to congress as "a body of Chamberlains."

The suppression of intellectual discussion, in his opinion, is a sort of "conspiracy of silence," that leaves the public dangerously blind-folded. He thinks people ought to speak out, clearly and forcefully, on all issues. "Congress," says he, "is always maintaining the fiction that we are hopelessly dumb in foreign affairs, and the slick European politicians are too much for us. The contrary is true. Hughes, Stimson, and Hull were a wonderful string of Secretaries of State; our foreign policy has been the most intelligent of any great nation on earth."

Looking Back

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY

Tuesday, May 18, 1920.

"Oh, Oh, Cindy" was presented at Opera House by local talent, sponsored by Federation of Women's clubs.

Birth report: Daughter to Mr. and Mrs. Guy Hainer, 69 Mendota street.

Mrs. Edwin Meese and two sons returned home after spending several months in St. Petersburg, Fla.

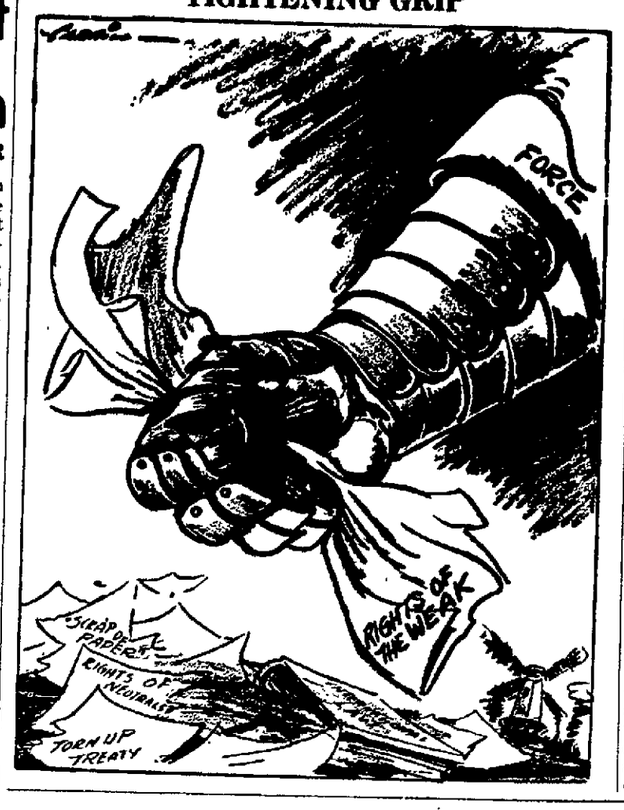
TIGHTENING GRIP



Story of a Small Businessman

By WALTER E. SPAHR
Professor of Economics, New York University.

ON A short auto trip with a small businessman recently he told me of his business headaches substantially as follows:

"I'm a manufacturer of certain style goods for women and employ fifty-nine people in my New York plant. I have gone along rather well in a small way for some twenty years, and have had pleasant, relations with my employes several of whom have been with me for eighteen years.

"Not long ago, under the protection afforded labor racketeering by the National Labor Relations Act and the Labor Board, a big, tough labor organizer came to my office and told me that he was going to organize my shop and make my employes kick-in some dues. My employes did not wish to be organized, and none of them knew or had ever heard of this organizer. We protested, and he told me that he had six million dollars with which to lick me and that I wasn't big enough to fight him.

"He kept my employes out of the shop for ten weeks. They were afraid to return because he had told them his men would bash in their heads if they tried it. So they were unable to return to their work until they paid this racketeer for the right to work.

"Imagine, if you can, peaceful, hardworking American citizens being compelled to pay tribute to a labor racketeer for the privilege of working! It cost them ten weeks of work and me $27,000. I haven't much money, and that single experience nearly wrecked me. All I have is in that business, and all I can do is to go on until I am ruined. I could not offer any protection for my employes and I had no police protection for my stock of goods which the racketeer threatened to ruin with acid. I'd quit business if I knew of anything else I could do.

"You economists can't appreciate what we small businessmen are up against; you would have to be in the business to know. We are at the mercy of labor racketeers. It is clear that those economic pansies in Washington don't understand—or they don't care, or are trying to wreck this nation.

"The psychology of these labor leaders is an amazing thing to contemplate. They think they own everything and can do what they please. They think they can buy any politician, with labor funds, clear up to the president. They think they own him and that he is simply their chief. Fairness means nothing to these people. They are in the saddle and take it for granted that the Labor Board and the president are with them.

"The president can't understand what is going on. No president could understand and be so lacking in principle as to approve these things, no matter if he is a politician and has figured out that there are more employes than employers. In the end this madness can only result in more laborers walking the streets in search of jobs. It's dangerous business.

"I have a friend similarly situated who says that after a lifetime of hard work he has managed to save enough to take care of his wife and himself in their old age, but that if this sort of thing continues much longer he may lose it all. So he is going to try to hang on until after the election and, if Mr. Roosevelt or any other New Dealer is elected, he is going to shut up shop, liquidate his business, and spend his savings. That will mean that all his employes will suffer.

"A lot of businessmen feel that way about it all. They are discouraged, and some of them feel desperate, and, of course they won't put a dime in their business that is not absolutely necessary. Is it any wonder that capital is not being invested and that men are unemployed?

"I'm sure my experiences are typical. Only a few large concerns seem to be able to hold out against this thing. It will take years to get this country back on its feet. The average businessman feels licked. He has been taught that the government is his enemy and that he cannot expect justice from it. He is ready to quit."

"What Swimmeth Below?"

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

EDWARD ARLINGTON ROBINSON, famous New England writer, wrote a true and terrible line once.

"Hearts are dark places," he said.

Sidney Lanier, Southern genius, put the same thought into an unforgettable verse. Lanier loved the sea—and the marshes that encircled the sea, with the great live-oaks glooming above their shadowed reaches and the salt tides rising, falling, whispering, calling through the endless web of their winding sloughs. Like life, those marshes seemed to him . . . like the human heart in their beauty and loneliness, their wildness and shadowed secrets.

So, in time, Lanier came to write his immortal poem, "The Marshes of Glynn," with its haunting lines that sing forever of the surf and the soul and their common mystery. Remember the exquisite beginning?

"Glooms of the live-oaks, beautiful-braided and woven—
With intricate shades of the vines that myriad-cloven
Clamber the forks of the multiform boughs,
Emerald twilights,
Virginal shy lights,
Wrought of the leaves to allure to the whisper of vows.
When lovers pace timidly down through the green colonnades
Of the dim, sweet woods, of the dear, dark woods,
Of the heavenly woods and glades,
That run to the radiant marginal sand-beach within
The wide sea-marshes of Glynn."

Lovely lines—mounting in beauty with each verse—as life and love mount in beauty at the dawning. Then suddenly the mood swings—darkens—dips beneath the shining tide. And Lanier pictures those dark mysteries and coiling terrors which slip and ooze beneath the gleaming surface of things. Listen:

"And now from the Vast of the Lord will the waters of sleep
Roll in on the souls of men.
But who will reveal to our waking ken
The forms that swim and the shapes that creep
Under the waters of sleep?
And I would I could know what swimmeth below when the tide comes in
On the length and the breadth of the marvellous marshes of Glynn."

"And I would I could know what swimmeth below—" DO YOU know "what swimmeth below" your prudent, placid surface? Have you ever even tried to find out? If you want large adventure, and some disconcerting discoveries, just start trying to find out!

"Hearts are dark places." They are indeed! So dark, we've barely lighted their outermost margins yet. You can probably describe in intricate detail, every gadget in your automobile—every move in last night's bridge game. But it's a fair bet you don't know what lies behind your most ordinary act or gesture. For instance—

Do you know why you love to tell about the "dear old days," Mable? Or why you get so sore at 17-year-old Junior, Jim? Do you know why many adults like to sleep with their knees drawn up toward their chins? Or why Harry starts grieving for his first wife every time his fourth one beats him at tennis. Or why that nice, quiet young Jones boy hates his father?

THE ANSWERS ARENT AS PRETTY AS YOU MAY THINK!

Interested? You'd better be. For, whether you know the answers or not, you can be sure of this—"what swimmeth below" will sooner or later determine what explodes above!

Timely Editorial

A Wise College President.

One hears often of educators who lose command of student bodies with ill-considered "stands;" not so often of the many who disarm the boys and girls with displays of understanding firmness. Youth is the period of rebellion, and spring is the occasion. At Oberlin, a group of students, suffering from both, proposed to bring Earl Browder to the campus for a speech against war.

Said President Ernest H. Wilkins, discussing their request: "My general belief is that the student is almost always right, but not quite always. You are not mistaken in your underlying desire to support the principles of freedom of speech. Keep that up as long as you live." As to the Browder invitation, he hoped that the students knew that they would be entertaining a man who has been convicted of faking passports in the interests of another and totalitarian country. Communism, he continued, is freely explained, along with other isms, in the classrooms; so Browder could contribute nothing there. And as for peace, the college had received various speakers equally and perhaps more honorably against war. So Mr. Browder has not been asked to speak at Oberlin.—Detroit News.

Summary of Week's Happenings

—By ASSOCIATED PRESS

CONGRESS was preparing, over the week-end, to move swiftly in authorizing expenditures sufficient to start America's new defense program on its way at the earliest possible moment.

The solemn admonitions in President Roosevelt's address before a joint session Thursday afternoon impressed congress and the nation as being well founded and met immediate favorable response.

It didn't take this speech by the president nor his explicit statement that America has no "mystic immunity," to start congressmen worrying anew about defenses. Germany's invasion of the Lowlands did that.

When he asked for an extraordinary defense program to cost more than a billion dollars, erstwhile penny-pinching lawmakers indicated they would back it. Where the money would come from was secondary, he said; again they nodded.

Republican Rep. Wolcott asked colleagues: "Why not be honest? The debt limit has got to be raised. If the Democrats want to do it . . . I am willing to introduce the legislation."

Senator LaFollette, "perfectly willing" to vote for any necessary defense funds, demanded why the "sudden claims of deficiency . . . despite huge appropriations." He asked for an "exhaustive survey" of U. S. defenses.

Such a survey would show:

The U. S. has 300 warships (15 of them battleships); about 225,000 regular army men and 250,000 national guardsmen. Also the air corps expects to have 2,665 first-line planes by July, 5,500 a year later.

Already, Chief of Staff Marshall has asked congress to expand the regular army by 15,000 to permit creation of a sixth "streamlined" division; and to provide enough money to finish purchasing materials and munitions sufficient to equip 750,000 men backed by 750,000 reserves.

Rep. May, head of the military committee, thought the U. S. should give military training to the 250,000 boys in CCC. He also opined: "I've come to the conclusion that unless we send supplies and munitions to the Allies we're going to have to send men. I don't want to have to send the men."

Meanwhile the president let it be known that the U. S. could not agree to change its policy from neutrality to non-belligerency, as Argentina suggested for the Americas. However, the U. S. did say it would join other American republics in protesting Germany's invasion.

War and Third Term.

Political prognosticators figured the invasion might have the effect of convincing FDR that he should run again. Four senators—Norris, Thomas of Oklahoma, Minton and Lucas—said the president might be forced to seek a third term to insure continuation of his foreign policy. Piped New York's fiery Mayor LaGuardia: "Under conditions today, if Franklin Roosevelt is running I am going to vote for him."

Republican Senator Reed thought that if the GOP "can't beat Roosevelt on two issues—the third term and involvement in the European war—then we can't beat anyone."

Candidate Vanderberg learned that a Republican leader influential in eight southern states swung to him because, "at this time of crisis in international affairs Vandenberg's wide experience is vitally important."

Abroad

Cabinet Cleaning.

As a prime minister, Neville Chamberlain's weakness was his "devotion to colleagues who are either failures or need a rest," once apologized the stolid London Times.

When brash Wintson Churchill redid the cabinet last week-end he laid an impolite hand on many of Chamberlain's Conservative favorites. Virtually the only trace he left of Munich was Chamberlain himself. Of the 10 top men chosen by Churchill, four are Laborites, one a Liberal, and two are maverick Conservatives.

The Indies.

Both Japan and England said this week that they intended to maintain the status quo (Dutch control) of the Dutch East Indies. England, meanwhile, sent troops to maintain the status quo of the Dutch West Indies, near Venezuela. The British troops' chief duty was to protect oil refineries against possible German sabotage. And Holland, said a British source, captured 26 German merchant ships in the East and West Indies.

* * *

'Down With England!'

Although Pope Pius XII announced he was on the side of Holland, Belgium, and Luxembourg, "pro-belligerent" Italy this week made every effort to whip up anti-Allied feeling.

Students howled "Down with England" in a dozen cities while Il Duce smiled. Anti-British incidents were reported everywhere. An Englishman got slapped in a Rome night club; two British embassy officials were pummeled in Rome by angry blackshirts.

Ominously, Italy called up army reserves and strengthened the forts on her border with France. And on Thursday President Roosevelt asked again that Mussolini keep Italy out of the war.

Quotes

Secretary of State Hull: "A nation which curbs freedom of thought or denies the dignity of the human soul dooms itself inevitably to decadence."

Major General Walter C. Short: "Our soldiers at this time, I believe, are the toughest peace-time army in American history. . . . There is only one army that can be compared with them: that part of the German forces which fought in Poland."

At Home

Note to Graduates.

Running a factory machine will pay a high-school graduate more than a white-collar job, New England plant managers reported this week to the New England council's industrial committee, Boston. Chances of advancement are also better in the shops, the managers said.

Long Gone.

"To avoid embarrassment," as he put it, Governor Earl Long left Baton Rouge, La., hastily this week. So he missed a barbecue in honor of incoming Governor Sam Jones—who beat Long for the job.

Long's departure marked the end of a year's bitter fight between the state machine led by him and a coalition of reform groups. His departure by no means marked the end of trouble for the reformers in Louisiana. Jones & Co. had to: (1) abolish dictatorial decrees of the late Huey Long; (2) cut through the jungle of Louisiana finances.

In Short

Retired: Shirley Temple, at 11, with one to three million dollars in the bank from her movie earnings.

Passed: President Roosevelt's request for $975,650,000 for WPA, by the House Appropriations Committee.

Concluded: That refined sugar in the diet is a big cause of tooth decay, by University of California scientists.

Died: Emma Goldman, 71, once the flaming champion of anarchy in America, in Toronto, Canada.

Ohio Anecdotes

Ohio Journalist-Diplomat.

BRAND WHITLOCK, much-traveled writer and diplomat, was born at Urbana in 1869, stemming from a Jacobite Scottish grandfather, Major Carter Brand, a Virginian who freed his slaves before settling in Ohio.

Major Brand gave his grandson something to live up to when he became counsul at Nurnberg during the Civil war. And Whitlock did it.

After high school, Whitlock spurned family tradition and college at 18 to go into journalism for six years, three each in Toledo and Chicago. He opened a law office in Toledo in 1893 after passing the Ohio bar.

As the World war opened he was ambassador to Belgium, where he cared for destitute Belgians. Germans assailed him bitterly for his written account of the circumstances surrounding the execution of Nurse Edith Cavell. Whitlock died in 1934.

Nazis Try Lightning Stroke

THE German militarist's vision of an ideal war is said to be one great battle, one great victory.

He dreams of swooping on his victim in a mighty engulfing movement around the flanks, and sputters at thought of a war of siege, a war of attrition.

A flank attack requires elbow room. Today, as in the past, the German general does not worry much if his attack takes him through a small neutral nation that happens to be in the way.

The French general sees war, in contrast, as a "mass of maneuver." He likes to trade punches, hold many armies poised behind him while he finds the enemy's weak spot, then uncork the attack.

Herr Hitler has demonstrated his unscrupulousness so frequently that cool-headed General Gamelin, Allied commander, could hardly have been caught unaware when he invaded Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg.

By Thursday the objective of Hitler's lightning invasions still wasn't clear. The conquest of Holland suggested he was seeking bases for a smash at the country he is said to hate most, Britain. The drive into Belgium indicated his objective might be Paris. Some persons thought his troops might head for both places.

Holland: 1,000 Died an Hour.

Commander Hitler did not surprise the Dutch. For 36 hours they stood off his legions near the border to permit full flooding of their flood water line which protected the big cities of The Hague, Amsterdam and Rotterdam.

The main German smash forked out at Arnheim, which fell the second day. Another drive across the flat, virtually unprotected stretches of northern Holland toward Groningen and the Zuider Zee dam met little resistance.

In five days — during which Dutch soldiers died at the rate of 1,000 an hour—the Germans outflanked or penetrated most of Holland's water defenses. Bombers obliterated pill-boxes in flooded areas. By Thursday the sixth day, all formal resistance had been crushed.

Queen Wilhelmina and her government escaped to England where she continued to claim sovereignty over the Dutch empire.

Belgium: Tank Meets Tank.

Just where the Belgians—and Allies—hoped to stall the Germans in case of attack on Belgium was not revealed. But as they fell back from the Liege bastion (where the Kaiser's cocky warriors were stymied for more than a week) they said they were withdrawing to a "wall on which the great battle will be fought." They did not state where the "wall" was located.

One prong of Germany's drive went up toward Brussels and Antwerp; others headed down the Meuse valley past Namur and Dinant toward France.

On a flat stretch northwest of Liege, French and German tanks clashed in a titanic melee. The French said their "land battleships" proved superior by scattering 1,500 Nazi tanks.

Words of the Wise

Public sentiment ought to signify the common march of good men's thoughts, and should be but a road, marked plain, that all may know the way to travel.—But too often it is employed as a bribe to stop free thinking, and intimidation to check free acting, a bauble to lure approbation or a threatened fool's cap with which to terrify it.—H. W. Beecher.

HOROSCOPE

For Sunday, May 19.

SUNDAY'S horoscope holds testimonies of a very interesting and perhaps eventful day, with much pertaining to conventional Sabbath activities under high pressure. New matters pertinent to church and clerical plans are due to succeed despite firm opposition from elders and superiors, as well as group impediments. Perseverance and sound plans win the day, but keep firm control on tongue and temper.

Those whose birthday it is may prepare for a very lively and enterprising year, with the energies and faculties under high tension. New projects of an ambitious nature should move resolutely toward progress and stability in spite of determined opposition and obstacles. Initiative and industry win out.

For Monday, May 20.

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is a conflicting one, with happy and propitious auguries for all of a personal nature—social, domestic, artistic and affectional. These hold major attention. In other directions, affiliations with groups or influential personages, there may be an open clash or secret undermining. Unless the aims are for public or social benefits, there may be defeat. Seek feminine assistance and develop their plans and ideals.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a very happy and successful year in their private life—social, artistic, domestic and romantic. In other activities there may be lack of co-operation from those in power unless such are animated by lofty feminine ideals and constructive ends. Clubs, groups, fraternities offer opposition unless the aim is lofty and humanitarian.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

"The Authority on Authorities"

CONVENTIONS DO HELP

ONE PURPOSE served by a convention of the Blackwood type, which tells one player about the exact number of aces held by his partner, is the showing up of psychic bids by the opponents. Many a victory is boasted by users of bizarre calls, in keeping their antagonists from reaching slams which cannot possibly be beaten. A goodly number of these could be contracted for soundly by pairs equipped with conventional ace-showing methods, whereas those without them have to make a blind guess.

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 ♦	Dbl
1 ♠	1 NT	Pass	3 ♥
3 ♠	Dbl	Pass	4 ♠
Pass	5 ♥

Harry B. Raffel, in the North, and Charles H. Weissenbach, in the South, pretty shrewd customers, both sensed the strength against them. When Mr. Weissenbach noted his fine diamond fit for an escape, he decided to impede his opponents in spades. Even his rebid of 3-Spades was not risky, because if doubled he could always go into diamonds.

West certainly showed he had something in spades with first his No Trump call and later his double at the range of three, but when East bid 5-Spades, it sounded to West like the showing of a void and a mild slam invitation. Hence his takeout. If East had seen fit to show his spades the first turn, or if West had bid spades in their natural meaning, the opponents could have been shown up. But even without doing that, the small slam could have been reached at hearts if East had bid 4-No Trumps a la Blackwood. His partner would have bid 5-Hearts to show two aces, and East would then have known that the slam was definitely worth bidding. Since East and West get along without any slam conventions except old-fashioned cue-bidding, they were strapped by the tactics of North and South.

CHAPTER XIII

It was not until March that Julian telephoned again. And it was Saturday morning again on a cold, sunless day.

"Brooke?" in clear, precise tones. "This is Julian Carter."

She had to recall him again—his tall body, fair hair, sunburned face, the inquisitive blue eyes and cleanly cut profile. She had all but forgotten him.

After he had asked how she had been, he said pleasantly, "If you are free this afternoon, you are going skating with me at Rockefeller Place."

Once before, she remembered, he had not asked her to have dinner with him but had announced that she was going to have dinner with him. A month before, so anxious to please every one, she would not have said what she said now: "Am I?"

He laughed. "What time? And have you skates?"

"Yes." Skates unused for a year. "At two."

"Good."

It was not until one o'clock, when she left Mrs. Kingsbury and went to her own room, that she thought of him again. She put on her heaviest dress, a blue wool one, and took from the closet a wine colored cardigan, which she would not put on until she was leaving. It was foolish to attach any importance to Julian's second call. No doubt he was merely curious to see again what Rod had rejected. Having lived within herself so many weeks, she had no particular desire to be sociable. That was wrong, of course. "Why can't I be glad?" she wondered.

When she opened the door and saw his swift smile respond to her feeble one, she had no way of knowing that to Julian's inquisitive eyes she was a vastly different girl from the scared girl who had come into Barney's living-room many weeks ago. The expressive dark eyes.. would never be quite so naive or so frightened or so eager for approbation again. Her slender body, colorful in the blue frock, moved with graceful indifference.

"Hello," she said. She had to look up to see him. His sunburn had faded but his color was good. He was wearing brown tweeds and a brown sweater.

"Hello," Julian said cheerfully, stepping inside the small foyer, looking at her with eyes that were both curious and amused. "Are you dressed warmly enough? But I forgot. You're a New Englander. You say our coldest weather is mild to you."

"I thought you were a New Englander, too."

"I used to be and I am again when I can be." He looked into the living room and then back at her, his eyes narrowing. "So this is where you live. . . ."

His glance was intimate and his eyes seemed to see through her. They were eyes dishonest people would avoid, she thought.

She looked straight at him. "No, this is where I work. I'll get my sweater and hat and skates. . . ."

* * *

Going to her room, pulling a tight black felt hat over her dark head, she wondered if he would say anything about Rod. What did Julian Carlton, brilliant attorney of a brilliant family, want of her? What did he know of Rod and Irene that she didn't know? His bold glances, his penetrating eyes, made her uneasy. She felt that he was teasing her.

She returned to the living room, he came forward, took her skates and asked, "You've seen the skating there, haven't you? Have you ever skated there?"

She had been nowhere . . . "No, but I've seen them. Some of the children are wonderful." This would take her back to frozen New England lakes with Rod when she was sixteen. . . .

He was looking at her thoughtfully. "I haven't forgotten that I mentioned skiing to you. But there hasn't been any snow around here and we'd have to go so far I knew you couldn't manage very well to get away for a week-end."

They talked about skiing as they walked to his car, a long-nosed beige couple. Julian had skiied in St. Moritz and Sun Valley, he said simply, without ostentation. Brooke asked him about Sun Valley (they had to talk about something, she thought). He was completely unaffected and natural person, she saw now, and when he was not looking at her his attitude was as casual as his gait.

Looking up at him, she was conscious of the strength of his face and the distinguished forehead. She realized that though he was giving her a graphic picture of Sun Valley, he was also acutely aware of the snarling traffic through which he was guiding her and that his eyes, a beautiful blue in the daylight, missed nothing. She felt strength, humor and charm in him. She felt also a barrier she did not understand, a stubbornness, and thought that he could probably be vicious if he were angry. You can't see through him, she thought.

As they rode downtown, he swore at a stupid motorist, chuckled and apologized. She smiled and he smiled back, his eyes stripping her of all her inner thoughts. He hadn't been like that day at Barney's. He had been only some one good-looking and kind and amusing who had rescued her. Or perhaps, on second thought, she could look deeper under the skin now.

The car parked, they walked, the wind whipping their eyes. He put on her skates, laced them carefully, asked if they were comfortable and then put on his.

The rink was crowded and colorful with the costumes of women and children. Every one was chattering or laughing but cold would permit no idleness.

She waited for Julian. He came toward her, smiling, and they skated side by side, their hands free.

"You're very graceful, Brooke. That woman over there. Look at her! Shuffling back and forth, her knees wobbly. The anticipation of the fall is worse than the fall. . . . There she goes. . . ."

"Any one would be self-conscious with the gallery up there."

"Waiting for a spill so that they can laugh. It is funny when somebody falls down. And they're saying who is lovely and who isn't, and saying, of course, that you are. . . ."

She winced, slackening. Lovely! she was all that Rod had rejected!

Julian said, "Faster. Here, give me your hands."

She gave him her hands, wondering why, as never before, physical contact was repulsive to her, knowing it was not Julian who made it so.

Holding her hands in a firm grip, he said, "I saw Barney last week. He was down with the grippe. He asked about you but I had to admit I hadn't seen you."

Nothing of Rod. Nothing that was not superficial was said while they skated. When they were skating singly again she, wondering if she had lost all art, attempted figures and executed them so well that the gallery applauded. Julian laughed and skated to her, mocking. "Showing off, eh? It's great. Let's have some more." Then, "Whether you realize it or not, you're getting blue. If you're rather wait until you're purple to go across the street for something warm to drink. . . ."

She laughed lightly, her youngest, most abandoned laugh in weeks. It was good to laugh in the cold air, good to feel physically tired. "I think I'll go while I'm blue. . . ."

Her face tingled when she sat opposite him in the warm restaurant and pulled off her gloves. Julian's face was scarlet as he lighted a cigaret, folded his arms and looked at her with the intimacy which seemed to say that he knew her better than she suspected, better than she knew herself.

Her crimson mouth curved. "Why do you look at me like that?" "I was thinking how lovely you are! But we all say that, don't we? It's pretty cheap. How to say that you move with a sort of catlike grace, that you have fine hands, that your dark hair is natural and very alive, and that your face is beautiful and sensitive, intelligent and innocent. . . ."

Her eyes were puzzled. It was as if he were praising a piece of statuary. How impersonally he paid compliments, as if he were just thinking aloud upon a passing object that pleased him! Yet what fine tributes they were, spoken with a seemingly sincerity and intuition.

Obviously he waited for the drink to warm her before he asked, "You're still in love with him, aren't you?"

She caught her breath a little. "I have always been and I think I shall always be," wondering what he was thinking while he studied her.

He said emphatically, "Put one thing out of your mind—that he married her solely for her money. He didn't. He was enchanted with her. And he'll continue to be enchanted until she slips and he begins to think of her as . . . old. She's clever but no woman so much in love is clever long. Irene will make a slip and—and it will be all over. Which should cheer you. . . ."

Her nerves were taut. "But it wouldn't be the same with us even if it were—over. . . ."

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

From almost the very first notes which Olina drew from the harpstrings, there was a look in the faces of her listeners—adequate critics all—which told me that they realized, as I did, that we were listening to a musician of unusual talent.

I knew Mary's generous nature, and was sure that she was as genuinely admiring Olina's exhibition as any of us were. But I knew also the sensitive pride that was hers, and how keenly she would suffer if Philip Veritzen's maneuvers should throw into sharp contrast the success Olina was having and her own failure if she did not get the chance to present the rendition of her role in which I had drilled her.

There came a last sweeping, triumphant chord from the harp. Olina's hands dropped from the strings to her lap, and she sat, quiescent, while the men and women of the cast advanced enthusiastically toward her.

But Mary outdistanced them all. With a swift, graceful walk which was like a run in its effectiveness, she was at Olina's side, grasping both of her hands.

"You've done it, old dear!" she said exuberantly. "That performance was marvelous! I didn't know there was exquisite music like that left in the world. Congratulations!"

If ever I saw sincerity in a woman's face, if ever I heard it in a woman's voice, I saw and heard it in that instant as she kissed Olina's cheek lightly but with affectionate enthusiasm.

"I wish Noel could have heard that!" she said—and if there was a trifle less sincerity in her voice nobody who did not know her intimately could have guessed the gradation—"He would have loved it and understood it so much better than I can. You must play it for him at the very first opportunity."

Antwerp Captured By Nazis; Battlefield 60 Miles From Paris

Defense of French Capital and Air Safety Of London Threatened by German Control of Belgium's Chief Commercial City.

Striving to combat the Nazi air superiority, France ordered all her aviation industries immediately on a 12-hour work day.

"The great rush is on again," a French war ministry spokesman declared. "The situation is very serious but not catastrophic."

In the face of attacks by formidable tank columns, including some 80-ton machines so strong that no gun smaller than a French "75" could stop them, the French indicated they had been able to hold the fight to the same general area yesterday—the Avenes - Vervins - Rethel - Sedan bulge, which the Nazis have pushed through the little Maginot line.

Against the German power thrusts the French threw fierce counter-attacks seeking to halt the invaders already between 35 and 40 miles inside the French frontier.

Great Britain announced her Royal Air Force again had penetrated western Germany to bomb military objectives.

All Britain was grave. The British press called it the "darkest hour" since 1918 when Allied armies faced defeat at the hands of the driving armies of imperial Germany.

London's gloom was deepened by a war office announcement that British troops had withdrawn to new positions west of the Belgian capital.

There was no British confirmation, however, of the Berlin claim that Nazi troops had occupied Brussels.

Announcement that Dutch and French forces had abandoned the island of Beveland and Walcheren in Zeeland province, last stand of the Dutch, heightened the foreboding of Britons. Official sources sought to stiffen British morale by saying the country had faced such situations before and was able to do it again.

The government of Prime Minister Churchill was reported trying a new, more friendly approach to better relations with Soviet Russia.

In the Balkans, where there was no relaxation of the fear of war, there and elsewhere in Europe, foreigners scurried to repatriate themselves. Italians in Rumania were advised by their legation to return home.

Rumania began a drive anew against "Fifth Columnists"; Greece called another class of reserves to the colors; Yugoslavia sought to find out what help she could expect from Greece if Italy should attack her.

Bitter fighting was reported again in the war in China. The Chinese claimed they had crushed the main Japanese force in central China and had captured Tsaoyang, Japanese base, after a day of fierce, hand-to-hand struggle.

British Press Admits Allies Face Darkest Hour Since 1918

(By Associated Press)

LONDON—Cast down by reports of new Nazi successes in Belgium and northern France, the British press admitted today that the Allies are facing "the darkest hour" since 1918, when their World war armies were hovering on the brink of a crushing defeat.

There was no official confirmation of a Berlin announcement that German troops already had occupied Brussels and Antwerp, but a war office communique acknowledging that British troops had withdrawn to new positions west of the Belgian capital plunged London deep into gloom.

Intensifying the forebodings was the disclosure that Dutch and French forces had abandoned the Netherlands islands of Beveland and Walcheren, in Zeeland province, after a heavy bombardment by German planes and artillery.

The press made no attempt to hide the gravity of the situation.

Official sources counselled the British public to keep "stout hearts and cool heads," and said that while the situation is grave it is not "irremediable."

"Britain has faced tests like this before and can face them again," the appeal said. "There must, however, be no illusion about the fact we are now facing the first stages of the most tremendous battle in the history of the world."

German mechanized forces, which have penetrated the Allied lines in the vicinity of Charleroi, some 30 miles south of Brussels, were reported to be fanning out, threatening encirclement of British right flank.

Virginia Marion was named editor-in-chief of the "John Simpson Times," student paper at John Simpson junior high school, for the 1940-41 school year at the annual staff dinner in the school cafeteria last night.

HITCH-HIKERS USE GAS BRIBE

Transients Must Have Car to Get Utah Motor Fuel.

ELY, Utah—(AP)—To hitch-hike technique and the gasoline bribe method.

Sheriff J. E. Orrock said it works like this:

A transient drops into the county relief office with a tale of being stranded for lack of money or gasoline. The county obliges with gasoline.

The transient then uses his motor fuel to hitch rides.

Since Sheriff Orrock discovered the strategy, the county has quit giving away gasoline until transients prove they own a car.

COOK HAPPY NOW

North Pole "Discoverer" Gets Pardon In Mail Fraud.

PORT CHESTER, N. Y.—(AP)—Nurses reported today that the aged Arctic explorer Frederick A. Cook, seriously ill from a stroke, received with a feeble "thanks—happy" the news that he has been fully pardoned of a mail fraud conviction.

President Roosevelt granted the pardon yesterday to the 74-year-old man whose claim to have discovered the North pole was disputed for years.

DEFECT FOUND

PUT-IN-BAY —(AP)— Linemen have found a defect in a submarine cable that has left three Lake Erie islands without telephonic communication to the mainland for more than two months. The Northern Ohio Telephone company said the cable would be repaired and services restored in a few weeks.

DEFENSE GETS RIGHT-OF-WAY

the announcement of Col. Frank Knox, Republican vice presidential nominee in 1936, that Mr. Roosevelt had authorized him to disclose plans for "Plattsburgs of the air," an idea conceived and backed by a group of patriotic citizens. This project envisions a series of training camps to produce thousands of military fliers.

The senate military appropriations subcommittee, which acted on some of Mr. Roosevelt's special defense recommendations yesterday, met again to add another $132,000,000 to the army bill.

This additional sum would represent the army's share of the $200,000,000 fund which the president requested congress Thursday to place at his personal disposal. The subcommittee worked at such a pace yesterday that this item was overlooked, and today's session was to remedy the omission.

One of the first steps toward expanding the nation's industrial resources to meet preparedness demands was the calling of a meeting of American aircraft manufacturers here Monday. The subject for discussion was increasing warplane production to 50,000 annually.

Assistant Secretary of War Johnson estimated that a 25,000-a-year mark would be reached by next January without emergency methods.

The question of federal financial aid in expanding plant capacity was being studied, Mr. Roosevelt said at his press conference yesterday. The government might build and retain ownerships of new plants, he continued, but entrust their operation to private enterprise.

Americas Denounce Invasion of Neutrals.

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay—(AP)—The United States and the 20 other American republics have gone on record with an official denunciation of Nazi Germany's invasions of neutral countries.

Uruguay drafted the declaration. It was sent to all the other republics by Foreign Minister Alberto Guani and last night Chile and Nicaragua sent in unreserved approvals to make it unanimous.

Montevideo had a man-in-the-street manifestation of the country's sentiment when demonstrators marched through the streets last night, shouting, "Down with Naziism! . . . Down with Hitler!"

Several mounted police were hurt by stones when they sought to disperse the demonstrations. Several shots were fired into the air. A Germon-owned cafe was stoned.

In Buenos Aires, at about the same time, there was an anti-Allied demonstration.

German sympathizers shouted "Down with England," "Down with France." Four noise bombs were exploded.

Guani said the attitude of the United States was one of "unreserved adhesion" to the text of the Uruguay protest, without amendments or additions.

Argentina, Paraguay and Colombia, who with all the other American republics are cooperating in the neutrality system instituted by the pan-American conference, withdrew minor objections to the Uruguay declaration.

Chile announced her readiness to convene with the other American governments to "study all means designed to reinforce and make more effective the security of the nations of this hemisphere."

Sales Revenue Climbs $373 Over Previous Week.

Sales tax receipts in Richland county were up $373 for the first week of May over the corresponding week of 1939, collections totaling $13,882 as compared to $13,509 last May.

Receipts since Jan. 1 total $187,011, a gain of 16 per cent over the $160,270 collected in the first four months of 1939.

Collections for the entire state showed a gain of about $176,000 for the first week of May and receipts for the year passed the $15,000,000 mark, an increase of more than a million dollars over a corresponding period of 1939.

Yanks Locate Range

Defeat White Sox, 6 to 1 Against Left Hand Hurling; Second Win.

(By Associated Press)

SIGNALS over! Lefthanded pitching isn't making the world champion New York Yankees lie down and play dead any longer, so the opposing managers in the American league had better scout out some new strategy quickly.

There was no doubt that any kind of southpaw slinging would befuddle the Yanks during the first month of the season. The champions faced lefthanded hurlers in 14 of their first 20 games and lost ten of them.

But things are different now. During the gloomy days the Yankees' batting order had five lefthanded hitters (six when Atley Donald or Vernon Gomez pitched.) Yesterday there were only two and the club crushed the Chicago White Sox 6-1.

The second straight triumph raised the Yanks within a half game of the seventh place White Sox.

In the day's only other game in the American league the Cleveland Indians massacred the Washington Senators 18-1.

In the best pitching stint, however, Claude Passeau held the New York Giants to two singles in giving the Chicago Cubs a 4-0 shutout.

The game was marred by an accident in the first inning when Stan Hack of the Cubs was hit on the head by a ball batted by teammate Hank Leiber. Hack was knocked unconscious, but the injury wasn't as serious as at first believed and the player was due to be released from a New York hospital today.

* * *

A heroic home run with the bases loaded in the 11th inning was Ival (Poison Ivy) Goodman's good deed for the Cincinnati Reds and helped break up the game with the Phillies 7-2.

"Woods and Waters"

By YUNCKER BROS.

The strange disappearance, once every five years of red salmon in Bristol Bay waters off Alaska, is one of nature's mysteries. These cycles occur in years ending in zero and five, so experts of the canning industry and the U. S. Department of the Interior, expect a small run of these fish in 1940.

The beaver may appear docile but he is a scrapper. When aroused he will readily engage in a fight with his greatest aquatic enemy, the otter, sometimes to the death of both of them. And a beaver can kill a dog, too, if the dog tries to battle him in the water.

The Mossbergs, down at New Haven, Conn., have come out with a new type of .22 caliber rifle, in both tubular or clip repeater models. They have modern, streamlined stocks, with forend extending almost to muzzle, bolt actions, and accurate barrels. Most men like the way they "feel" and "handle." Let Yuncker's show you these ultra-modern rifles.

One of the best plugs for early bass fishing (season opens June 16) is the traveling surface lure. The bass leaves the deeper waters in late March or April to spawn in the shallows, and they reside in the surrounding neighborhood, until the warm weather sets in. They easily detect any good lure on top of the water, and as they are pugnacious, with a "chip on their fin," the bass will hit this type of plug quite readily. You'll find these and other types of plugs, in an extensive selection at Yuncker's.

One of the unusual facts about bears (except grizzlies) is that their claws match the normal color of their hair. A black bear always has black claws, a brown one has brown claws, and so on . . . and they all do their own manicuring.

The deer has an effective attack against rattlesnakes. He will leap high into the air, drawing all four feet together, then comes straight down on the hapless snake, repeating the process over and over. The deer's knife-edge hoofs literally cut the snake to ribbons.

In addition to tightening the motor clamps on your outboard motor, it's a good plan to tie or chain the motor securely, in case vibration loosens the clamp screws. Many a motor is "asleep in the deep" because this precaution was not taken.

Findlay Invades Fairground for Contest Tonight

Lloyd Joyce Gives Up Nine Hits as Braves Suffer Second Straight Defeat.

By CHARLES MARTIN

SNOW appeared at the Fairground last night as the Mansfield Braves battled Tiffin in an Ohio State league contest before some 150 shivering spectators.

It didn't come from the sky, either, but from the Tiffin bench and the Braves were not the least bit happy as they dropped a 6 to 3 decision and fell into last place in the circuit championship race.

The Snow last night was George Snow, Mudhen righthander, who handcuffed the Mansfielders with five hits to register his first victory of the season.

Manager Dewey Stover and his Braves are praying today for warmer weather as they prepare to play host to the Findlay Oilers under the floodlights at 8:15 today.

Stover picked Bob Arnold to face the Oilers as the Braves fight to break a two-game losing streak. It will be Arnold's second start of the year.

Lloyd "Deacon" Joyce was on the hill for the Braves last night and except for a relapse in two innings kept the Mudhens under control. In those two frames Tiffin tallied five of their runs.

The way the Braves started teeing off against Snow in the first two frames it looked as though they would melt him. That clouting didn't last long for the Mansfield club got just two hits in the last five innings.

Mansfield moved ahead with a run in the first and added two in the second to take an early lead.

Tiffin opened its attack in the third with a three-run splurge, added one in the fourth and climaxed the scoring with two in the seventh. Incidentally, all the runs scored last night were unearned. Errors—both teams committed three apiece—paved the way for the scores.

After knotting the score at 3-all in the third, Tiffin, aided by an error and a walk, picked up a one-run lead in the fourth. A bobble, stolen base, coupled with two singles, produced the visitors' two runs in the seventh.

Joyce pitched good ball, and outside of the second, third and seventh, never allowed Tiffin more than a hit in any inning. The 14 hits collected by the teams last night were singles.

Several times Joyce pulled himself out of holes via the strikeout route. Things looked bad for Joyce in the second when the first two men to face him singled. But a Beals-to-Padar-to-Seigbert twin killing erased the danger.

Mansfield plays at Findlay at 3 p. m. Sunday and returns to the Fairground at 8:15 p. m. Monday to meet the Oilers for the third straight time.

Shaw Expected To Set Record At Track Meet

District Event Opens With Preliminaries at 10 A. M. Today.

Undaunted by the weatherman's promise of cloudy weather and possible showers, athletes from 26 high schools arrived in Mansfield today, determined to smash existing records in the eastern half of the Northwestern District track meet, which got underway at Stadium field at 10 a. m. today.

* * *

Spotlight in today's meet rests principally on Bob Shaw, Fremont Ross weightman, and Fleming, Sandusky dash man.

Shaw shattered the Mansfield Relays record a month ago in the shot put by tossing the iron ball 54 feet. He has also been outshining rivals all season in the discus event.

Fleming, dusky Sandusky streak, has been clocked at impressive times this spring in the 100 and 220-yard dashes. Fleming won both these events when Sandusky tangled with Mansfield here two weeks ago.

Plenty of action is also expected in the 440-yard run. Whitney, of Shelby, Owen, of Tiffin Junior Order, and Chestnutwood, of Fremont, have been turning in outstanding performances in the 440 this year and are determined to set a new mark for future district tracksters to shoot at.

* * *

Coach Mehock is pinning his hopes on Fred Atwater, Bob Yarman, and Condon to furnish points for the Red Streaks. Atwater has been a consistent winner in the high hurdles this season, while Yarman has scored a pair of victories in the mile run.

* * *

Condon, who got off to a slow start, has been showing his heels to opponents in the past few meets in the 880-yard run.

Indians Stage Parade

Score 10 Runs in First to Wallop Nats; Allen Pitches Today.

(By Associated Press)

CLEVELAND — Their big parade over, the Indians went back to baseball today with Johnny Allen nominated to hurl against Washington in the finale of a two-game series.

The Redskins marched around the bases (Nat pitchers issued nine walks) yesterday to trample the invaders, 18 to 1.

Cleveland scored 10 runs in the first inning on seven walks and five hits and tallied in all the other innings except the second and sixth.

* * *

Al Milnar pitched a masterful game in posting his fourth consecutive victory. He allowed seven scattered hits and passed only three batters.

* * *

Jeff Heath smashed his fourth and fifth home runs of the season and added a single.

Frankie Pytlak, who ended his holdout campaign early this month, made his first appearance of the year as he caught the last two innings for Cleveland.

Manager Bucky Harris indicated he would send Joe Haynes, young right-hander, to the hill against the Tribe today. The Yankees arrive tomorrow for three games, followed by Boston for two.

Meanwhile, the Indians received welcome news about their two cripples. Center Fielder Roy Weatherly reported he was ready for action after being out a week with a strained leg muscle. Oscar Grimes, utility infielder, was due at his home here after being confined to a Washington hospital with broken facial bones. He was hit by a batted ball in pre-game practice on the Tribe's eastern trip.

STOCK PRICES DECLINE WITH GLOOM OF WAR

Military Purchases Offset By Loss of Agricultural Market Abroad.

NEW YORK—(AP)— Price declines in the stock market were extended today as war gloom persisted in Wall Street.

Market analysts who have been watching economic curves noted the summary of the Anglo-French purchasing board at Washington indicating the Allies thus far have ordered more than $1,000,000,000 worth of "essential needs" from the United States, including airplanes and air equipment amounting to $650,000,000.

On the other hand a slightly pessimistic view was expressed by the bureau of agricultural economics which said that extension of the overseas melee to the low countries had injected a new element of uncertainty into an otherwise cheerful outlook for domestic conditions in the next few months. Except for cotton, the bureau added, exports of important farm products to the belligerents have virtually ceased.

On the hopeful side was the federal reserve survey disclosing the nation's department store sales for the week ended May 11, topped the like 1939 period by 7 per cent.

Sheriff Contest Unchanged; Check of Ballots to End Early.

Virtually complete today, the official count of votes cast in the primary last Tuesday so far has not changed the outcome of any of the close contests in the county, Clerk A. F. Porter of the election board said.

The 37-vote edge Ralph Schad, jr., held over Frank Deringer for the Republican nomination for sheriff was unchanged in the official count. The only change in the count for sheriff on the Republican ticket was a one-vote gain for A. Ray Frye who polled 463 votes.

In the Republican contest for county commissioner, L. M. Daugherty, Mansfield, lost five votes and Willard N. Groff lost one. There was no change in the vote for Cyrus L. Shoup and Harry Orewiler, the G. O. P. nominees.

Kenneth E. Shaffer, who won the Republican nomination for county engineer, gained 10 votes, increasing his total to 3298 and Theodore Lutz, Shelby, G. O. P. nominee of county prosecutor, gained five votes for a total of 2782.

James Brownscombe, Republican nominee for clerk of courts, added 16 votes to increase his total of 2433, while Howard Wenning, the Democratic nominee for the same office, lost 10 to reduce his vote to 3168.

Ralph C. Lutz, Lexington, winner of the 17th district Democratic nomination for congress by a narrow margin, lost five votes in the re-check, with his county total cut to 4871.

The bigegst error uncovered by the election board was 27 votes in the count for William F. Hurley, one of the two Democratic nominees for state senator from the 27th-29th district. The official count gave Hurley 27 more votes and increased his total to 2699 in the county.
